

REMEMBERING THE FIRST RWCS CONVENTION SATURDAY, JULY 9th, 1977

As we prepare for the July Convention, it's always interesting to look back at how everything started. In 2001, the RWCS will celebrate 24 years of organization. However, this year will also mark the 25th commemorative and 25th annual Convention. For those of you who were there at the first informal gathering in 1977, this will be a pleasant trip down memory lane. For those who have joined in the recent past, this will be a history lesson.

The first informal gathering of people who had an interest in Red Wing pottery occurred on Saturday, July 9th, 1977. The activities were held at the Goodhue County Historical Society Museum, where displays of stoneware and pottery were viewed by approximately 300 people. Lyndon Viel was there and he sold and autographed his new book, Clay Giants.

A business meeting, social hour and banquet were held in the St. James Hotel. Officers were elected and several issues were discussed. Dave Newkirk presented some special awards and Lyndon Viel was the keynote speaker. Some of the key issues that were decided that day included:

- Hold a second Convention in Red Wing in July, 1978
- Recognize all American made pottery
- Have a day long Show and Sale with members-only in the morning
- Limit attendance at Convention activities to members only
- Work with the Goodhue County Museum to encourage donations
- Establish membership dues
- Establish charter members as those who joined as of July 9, 1977
- Appoint two members to look into production of a commemorative piece for the 1977 Convention

At the first Convention there were no commemoratives available. So it was decided that Jewell Peterson and Rosa Larson would create the first commemorative. The 1977 salt-glazed crock was hand-thrown and decorated in cobalt blue with the Convention logo impressed on the back.

We visited with Jewell Peterson and asked her to share some memories of that first Convention.

"Who ever thought it would get so big?" said Jewell. It was so much fun getting together with other people who enjoyed collecting Red Wing items. It was all so new and everyone wanted to learn from each other. Jewell and Rosa Larson went to auctions together all the time. Jewell drove and Rosa was the navigator. The idea for the first commemorative came from an auction they attended. Jewell spotted a very unique salt glazed crock that had thinner walls than any other crocks she had ever seen. She did not end up with the crock, but never forgot it.

Jewell and Rosa worked with potters Bob Brodderson and Dave Kenyon of Spring Valley, Wisconsin to create the first commemorative. They had 250 commemoratives that sold for $7.50 each and Jewell had to take out a loan to cover the costs. The 1977 commemoratives were sold at the 1978 Convention along with the Common Jug, which was that year's commemorative. After a couple of years, they still had some 1977 crocks left. Jewell had a little antique shop in her garage and was known as the "Crock Lady" and she has really enjoyed the friendships that developed over the years with other Red Wing collectors.

Another charter member who shared his thoughts on the beginning of the RWCS is Wayne Bell. Wayne and his wife LaDonna spent many weekends at antique shops, flea markets and shows looking for interesting pieces. They bought their first set of dishes in 1946 from the Red Wing Minnesota Stoneware Company. The dishes were ridiculously cheap, according to Wayne, and were displayed on long wooden tables.

When Wayne discovered from a friend, who was a "picker" for antique dealers, that Red Wing pieces were going to become highly collectible, he and his wife really began to look for Red Wing items. At that time people were glad to get rid of the early Red Wing pieces because they were heavy. Their collection of crocks and jugs grew and they had almost a full range of butter jars. His wife had an uncanny eye for things that would later really increase in value. Many days they would come home with a trunk full of pottery and covered with dirt from digging around in antique shops.

When they heard that there was going to be a gathering of Red Wing collectors in Red Wing, they attended. Lyndon Viel signed them up as charter members. People had blankets spread out on the lawn of the Goodhue County Historical Society Museum with their collections on display. Wayne remembers Lyndon as a very interesting man with a great sense of humor who was very enthusiastic about Red Wing pottery.

Wayne also recalled that Jewell Peterson knew that LaDonna collected Old Provincial dinnerware. When they attended auctions and had plans to bid on these pieces, Jewell would encourage other people in the audience not to bid on the items so LaDonna would get them at a good price. "Jewell is a great lady", said Wayne.

"The beginning of the RWCS was like a family, with people sharing pictures of their collections and having fun," Wayne remarked. The Society has grown so much since that first get together but Wayne always tries to attend the annual Convention and look up old friends.

CORRINE REED

The RWCS Foundation continues to make progress toward the opening of the Red Wing Stoneware and Pottery Museum in time for Convention 2001. Located at the east end of the second floor of the Pottery Place Mall, it is very exciting to be bringing history back into the site of the Minnesota Stoneware Company. The Foundation expresses its thanks to the Iowa Chapter for its donation of $1,000 as well as to the individuals who donated 105 plates of different dinnerware patterns! Donations may be made by contacting the Foundation Board. Dealers are still welcome for the RWCS Foundation Fundraiser antique sale on the streets of downtown Red Wing on Sunday, July 8, 2001 being held from sunrise to sunset.

Given the success of MidWinter 2001, next year's MidWinter will once again be held at the Four Points Sheraton Hotel and Suites in Des Moines, Iowa, on February 15, 16, 17, 2002.

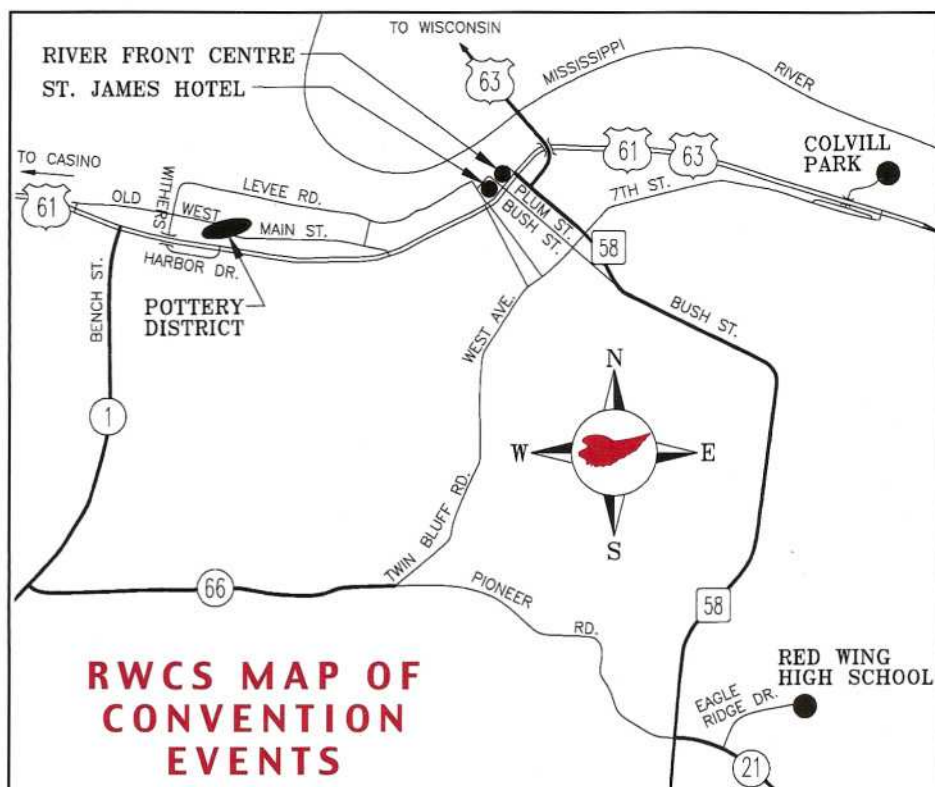

On behalf of the Society and the Board of Directors, thanks to

TAMPICO BIRDHOUSE

Don't throw that cracked plate away! Recycle it. I love my Red Wing Tampico dinnerware pattern and I use it for entertaining and for regular use during the summer. I also incorporate birdhouses into my kitchen décor. Last summer I broke one of my dinner plates and also had a chip in a couple of other Tampico pieces. I decided that I needed a "Tampico bird house" to grace my kitchen. A couple of hours effort, a little glue, some tile grout and I had my very own one-of-a-kind Red Wing collector piece. I have started a second venture, a patio wicker table-top that is in the process of being "Tampico-ized." I receive lots of nice comments on both of these pieces.

WENDY CALLICOAT

I have just returned from the Spring Full Board of Directors meeting in Red Wing, MN. Plans are well underway for the upcoming Convention. There are two full days planned for Kids View of Red Wing Seminars and we have 100 kids registered so far. Look for specific kids seminar topics in the schedule. We still need donations of "common" Red Wing pieces for the kid's auction. Last year the most popular item with the kids was the commemorative. (You might want to donate a chapter commemorative.) We are still looking for volunteers to help with the kid's activities, so contact us if you are interested.

Please be thinking of items that you would like to see on the agenda for the Chapter Presidents meeting this summer. One item that that should be discussed is the marketing of the Collectors Society. This was also a topic at the April board meeting.

RED WING POTTERY DISPLAYED AT 1898 TRANS MISSISSIPPI EXPOSITION

During the MidWinter GetTogether in Iowa, we had the chance to see a very unique photograph of some rare Red Wing pieces. Here is the story behind the photo.

Michael Lunkwitz has known about Red Wing Pottery from a young age. His mother and her antique dealer friend were always searching for Red Wing pieces when he was growing up. Michael enjoys collecting salt glaze and unique Red Wing pieces.

This past winter, Michael and a friend were visiting a museum in Nebraska. His friend noticed a Red Wing jug on display and pointed it out to him. Next to the jug was a photo taken during the Trans Mississippi Exposition, which was held in Omaha in 1898. The Trans Mississippi Expo was a gathering similar to the Chicago World's Fair, where companies would bring their products to display and sell to people.

This photo intrigued Michael, as it had some unique jugs in it. There were several 15 and 20 gallon jugs that said Union Stoneware and Elephant Ear jugs. The finishes

Next year's Convention 2002 will be the 25th Anniversary celebration of the RWCS. In addition, current officers and representative at large terms will expire. The Board of Directors is seeking candidates willing to provide their leadership to the Society to ensure its continued growth and prosperity. The RWCS needs you!

looked like they could possibly be zinc, and if so, they would be transition pieces. There were also beehives with numbers on them and no wings. He had never seen this photo in any of the Red Wing books he had read.

Michael did additional research and here is more information on the Expo.

The Trans Mississippi International Exposition of 1898 and the concurrent Indian Congress featuring 35 tribes were held in Omaha, Nebraska from June 1, 1898 through November 1, 1898. The Exposition showcased the developed West from the Mississippi River to the Pacific Coast. Business and community leaders from the 24 states and territories lying west of the Mississippi River envisioned the Trans Mississippi Exposition as a way to revitalize the regional economy and to show that the West had recovered from the financial panic of 1893.

During the four months of the Expo, over 2,600,000 people came to view its 4,062 exhibits. President William McKinley visited the Exposition on October 15th. The exhibits featured social achievements, economic productivity, and community growth of the western region. The Expo covered 108 city blocks, and it was referred to as the "White City" because of the large white buildings that were erected. The Exposition's monumental and elaborate temporary buildings were constructed of wood, plaster and horsehair in order to keep costs to a minimum. The buildings were razed soon after the Exposition closed.

We'd like to thank Michael for sharing his information and photo. The photos are also available for sale. You can contact Michael at Otto5@home.com or call 402-393-3409 if you would like additional information.

Convention Education 2001 will begin with three orientation sessions for first time Convention attendees. These will be held Thursday at 9 am and 1 pm and again on Friday at 9 am.

Convention 2001 will have more educational opportunities than last year!! Thursday's keynote speaker at 10:30 am will be Dave Short, talking about salt glaze stoneware. If you have heard Dave before, you know how his love of Red Wing comes through.

Shared interest sessions will be held at 2 pm and 3 pm on Thursday. There will be fewer shared interest sessions this year, as people would rather attend a learning seminar. Art pottery, dinnerware and stoneware identification sessions will be held. If you have a question about a piece, bring it or a picture to share with our experts. A brief presentation and question and answer session about the RWCS Foundation will be held. Larry Roschen will talk about commemoratives. A Reader's Theater production based on oral history projects done in Red Wing will be given. It will focus on work and play done in Red Wing during the last century.

Educational seminars will be held Friday the 13th at 10 am, 11 am, 12:30 pm, 1:30 pm and 2:30 pm. Here is a brief listing of the new seminars: "Canadian Stoneware", "Western Stoneware", "On the Trail of the Gypsy - Plain and Reed", "RW Bowl-er-ama" and "Memories of the Pottery" by a former worker. Some repeats from last year are: "Protecting and Managing Your RW Collection", "RW Memorabilia", "Brushware - Marked & Unmarked", "Hobby Shop or RW Art Pottery", "Advertising Stoneware" and "RW Mini Jugs". There will be other seminars offered on Friday as well.

An expanded feature will be more seminars for kids. Sue and Wendy have a lot of activities for our younger collectors to participate in on Thursday and Friday. Please check the supplement for the schedule when you arrive at the Convention. Most educational events will be held in the H pod, above the commemorative distribution area. (This is the same place as last year.)

It's also time for me to request ideas for sessions and people to do them. If you aren't interested, please volunteer your friend! Most Red Wing collectors have some area of expertise. It's time to share. We hope to see you at Red Wing High School for the 2001 Convention! 🍷

POTTERY X-FILES: QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Pottery X-File Experts: David & Diane Hallstrom and Larry Peterson

ITEM #1

Q I wanted to let you see my fantastic find. It seems like Red Wing in good condition is harder to find. But every once in a while you get lucky.

Robert Tyler, Illinois

A The area where the cobalt doesn't show is where the crock got too hot in the kiln and the cobalt burnt off. It was one of the most time consuming decorations to do because of having to stop and start each circle.

Depending on condition, the value would be $2,000 - $3,000.

ITEM #2

Q I bought this 3 Gal. Bee-hive Salt Glaze jug recently and think it might be a Red Wing (not marked). Can you tell me something about it?

Edward Lindenmayer, New York

A 3's are a hard size to find in decorated salt glaze beehives. Beautiful blue cobalt on this piece. The 3 and the markings are not typical of Red Wing. It was made in the late 1800's, and not likely Red Wing because of the markings.

Estimated value is $250 - $350

ITEM #3

Q I recently purchased a 5-gallon butterfly churn for $40 at a second hand store and would like to know if it is Red Wing and what it might be worth?

Sara Croymans, Minnesota

A This 5-gallon salt glaze butterfly churn has a beautiful cobalt decoration on it. Churns are probably the most difficult salt glaze piece to verify for sure that they are Red Wing unless they are signed. The 5, the -.-, and the butterfly, are all possibly Red Wing. Many decorators traveled from one company to another depending on work, so therefore a Red Wing design might be used at another stoneware company. Without a good picture of the handles, glaze, and the clay, it is difficult to know for sure.

With the limited information we have, we lean towards it not being a Red Wing piece.

CHAPTER UPDATES

SOUTHEAST REDWINGERS

The Southwest Redwingers hosted the annual Spring Fling on March 24th, 2001, at Kent Williamson's home in Phoenix, Arizona. Five Chapters were represented including the Nebraska Redwingers, Golden State, the California Chapter, Puget Sound, the Washington state chapter, the Iowa Chapter, plus the Southwest Redwingers. Each chapter gave a brief summary of their history and current activities. Lots of good information and ideas were exchanged. Corrinne Reed, President of the RWCS, briefed the group on the activities of the national Society and Wally Armstrong, representative-at-large reported on the activities of several other chapters who were not represented at the gathering. A wonderful meal provided by the members of the Southwest Chapter capped off the activities. A great time was had by all!

NEBRASKA REDWINGERS

They had their first meeting of 2001 on March 3, 2001 at York, Nebraska. There were 33 members and five guests present. Our program was a slide presentation of one of our members' collectibles and their stories of how they found their Red Wing pieces and their history.

The next meeting will be in Fremont at noon on Saturday, June 2, 2001 at Clemmons park with a bring-your-own picnic lunch. There will be homemade ice cream for dessert. A presentation on Fort Dodge Pottery will be the educational program. We also plan to distribute our 2000 commemoratives, which is a 5# refrigerator jar with lid, at the June meeting.

The July meeting will be at Convention and the time and location will be posted (probably at noon on Thursday). The October potluck meeting will be in Lincoln, most likely at the Schleich Pottery, Dinnerware and Stoneware Collection museum, Saturday evening, October 6; and the December meeting will be in Elkhorn at 1:00 pm with food furnished by our hosts, Rex and Pat Lucke, with a gift exchange. Guests are welcome at all of our meetings.

Dues are $10 per person. Primary or Secondary membership in RWCS is a pre-requisite. Treasurer is Mary Schleich, 9207 Simi Court, Lincoln NE 68526.
